

THE STATECRAFT GAME

Golda Meir complains that the Soviet Union is supplying hundreds of millions of dollars worth of arms to the Arabs to destroy the Republic of Israel. We wonder what in the name of high heaven Golda Meir and the rest of the Jews expected.

We were profoundly shocked by the orgy of self-congratulation in which the Jews indulged themselves after the "June War" of 1967. The last of our faith in the Jewish intellect was demolished. We asked ourselves incredulously, "Can the Jews really be stupid enough to think that they have won a victory?" NEWSWEEK and other media reported that "Israeli Intelligence had learned that Russia would not intervene, and would pursue a policy of maximum noise and minimum risk in the Middle East."

If I ran an intelligence service and had that kind of bums on my payroll, they would be fired by tomorrow morning at the very latest. We COMMON SENSE people are not James Bond types. In the spy novels they are always stealing "secret papers" from some diplomat's briefcase to see what he is up to. The really high-class intelligence operative never needs to stoop to any such expedients. He can tell you what will be on the papers in the enemy diplomat's briefcase without seeing them. COMMON SENSE knew the main trends of Soviet policy in the Middle East. What else did we need to know? It shocks us to see that the Jews and the Washington Administration apparently are unwilling to face the realities of the situation. They keep grinding blindly onward with policies which can only end in disaster. It appears that they are simply incompetent to deal with the situation.

The consequences of the "June War" of 1967 are staggering. The Jews would not possibly have started the war if they had known what the consequences of it would be. They did the most incompetent thing known to Statecraft. They made a leap in the dark. They acted without knowing what the consequences of their action would be. This is very nearly the ultimate incompetence. The mulish stupidity of the Jews confounds us. We are sometimes accused of being "anti-Semitic." There is one thing we would never do to the Jews though. We would never deport two and a half million of them to live on an overpopulated sandpile, where they are beset by the most utterly savage dangers on every hand. We would not do to the Jews what the Zionists have done to them.

Let us consider briefly the consequences of the "June War."

As a result of the June War, Russia is smoothly and inexorably taking over the Middle East. All American interests will be driven out of the Middle East. The losses will run to billions of dollars. Indeed, these staggering losses would cause a serious business depression in the U.S.A. You could lose YOUR job because of it. Beyond that, Russia is moving smoothly toward a takeover of Western Europe. Once Russia has the Middle East oil firmly in hand, Europe will be swept by an atmosphere of crisis. With the North African Coast under strong Soviet influence, NATO will be swept out of Europe. The U.S. Sixth Fleet will be squeezed out of the Mediterranean. The European IMPERIUM which Napoleon failed to establish, which Hitler failed to achieve, will be firmly established under Soviet Hegemony. The face of the whole world will be utterly changed. The so-called "Free World" is already a mere myth. Russia's plan for the establishment of an IMPERIUM is clicking along smoothly with uninterrupted success. Everything the Jews do, everything the subservient Nixon Administration does, only plays into Russian hands. We are profoundly shocked by the ignorant and incompetent policies being followed in Washington today. You too will be shocked when you have lost your job, or when your stocks have gone down because of these policies. Policies, did we say? The Administration has no policies; it is merely engaged in a debacle. The Soviet Union is smoothly taking over the world.

The Soviet leaders did not learn this kind of Statecraft from Karl Marx. This kind of Statecraft belongs to the school of Cardinal Richelieu, Prince Metternich, and Talleyrand. It is fundamentally reactionary and entirely inimical to Marxist purposes. Good Statecraft is not based upon mere "beliefs." The good practitioner of Statecraft must be a supreme realist. Cardinal Richelieu wore the Red Hat of a Cardinal of the Roman Catholic Church; yet he made military alliances with Protestant nations against Catholic nations. What is the justification of this apparent cynicism? Richelieu was the father of modern France. Generations of Frenchmen lived happily and successfully because of Cardinal Richelieu. They achieved the fulfillment of their cultural aspirations. They became a great nation. The competent practitioner of the art of Statecraft leaves "beliefs" and slogan-shouting to lesser men. The basic realities of Statecraft are the same from one age to another; they never change. For all of his apparent cynicism, Cardinal Richelieu was a good man. He was sufficiently a true man of God to see through the hypocritical pretensions of "Catholic" princes who would have schemed against France and used "The Faith" as a smoke screen to hide thoroughly secular ambitions. He knew the imperfection of men and the shallowness of many of their spiritual pretensions.

The present leaders of the Soviet Union practice Statecraft with supreme realism. We shall never understand the present policies of the Soviet Union as long as we harbor in our minds the remnants of the old "Red Russia" myth. Today the myths of "Communism" and "anti-Communism" are so much worthless humbug. In the recent past this humbug was enormously popular in the U.S.A. The Bourgeois Faith held that the working class had turned into a race of mad dogs. They were infected with revolutionary virus. They had allied themselves to "Red Russia" in a vicious conspiracy against all forms of decency. The working class was inherently evil; it was not permissible in good Bourgeois circles to hold or express any sympathy for them. For a hundred years, the Western world wallowed in an orgy of destructive class hatred. The ideas of Karl Marx led people to expect a gigantic collision of class forces. The whole business was preposterous from the start. If it were not so tragic, it would be funny. Tragic it was, and the Western world has never really recovered from its hundred-year orgy of class hatred. It boots nothing to say that the condition of the working class has improved, and that they are paid better wages now. The things destroyed were largely intangibles. A civilization badly riven by class hatreds is sick, sick, sick. It is a temporary camp. It has no need to worry about its future because it has no future. In Germany this was clearly seen by Adolf Hitler, who labored to heal the wounds of class warfare. Gustav Krupp also saw the folly of class hatred. Certainly Krupp was no "radical." He was the very beau ideal of the Haute Bourgeois. Yet Krupp did not want a macabre victory of "The Right Wing" over the working class. He wanted a harmonious and unified nation. In Italy, Mussolini's corporate state also worked to relieve class hatreds. Hitler and Mussolini have been much defamed by the Liberal press. They were not plaster saints, and we make no effort to make plaster saints of them. Nevertheless, they worked for social unity and against the destructive class hatreds which the Jews had introduced into Europe in order to divide the Gentile population.

Let us now dismiss the worthless Nineteenth Century myths of class hatred. Then we will be able to think of Russia in more realistic terms. There is no "Marxist Utopia" in Russia or anywhere else. What Russia actually has today is military socialism. The primary purpose of the system is to support armed forces. Socialism is very good for this purpose. Socialism is not good for supporting a free-spending Bourgeoise. It is not good for providing a high standard of living. Some time ago we published an article entitled Socialism and War, in which we pointed out that the main real purpose of Socialism is to support war. Russian internal policy is ideal for supporting powerful armed forces on a continuous basis, and using such forces in conjunction with skilled diplomacy to serve expansionist aims. Make no mistake about it: Russia has become extremely good at this kind of thing. In the U.S.A., when we become involved in a war, we always regard it as an undesirable emergency, which "must not happen again." Peaceniks march and demonstrate. Professors who ought to know better orate against war and proclaim that "eternal peace" is around the corner. Indeed, we have become the country of wonderful nonsense. Responsible and realistic voices are seldom heard.

Too much of our thinking has been made by the Jews. We lost all respect for the Jew as a practitioner of Statecraft at the time of the June War of 1967. The media were full of empty-headed propaganda about the "Great Jewish Victory." We Common Sense people looked down the corridor of the near-term future with clear-eyed realism and saw what would happen to Israel, what is happening to Israel today. Look at a map of the Mediterranean area. Imagine the Mediterranean shores and the Red Sea area in the hands of enemies of Israel. See how utterly isolated Israel will be! Think of what will happen to the millions of Jews whom the Zionists have swindled into going to live on this overpopulated sandpile!

American policy, geared to Jewish intellectual aims, has become an unbridled debacle around the world. Russian policy, based upon the realistic school of Statecraft, is more conservative and successful than American policy. The howling dervishes of American anti-Communism have provided little real enlightenment on this subject. They are merely in the business of peddling myths which tickle the itching ears of the provincial bourgeois. When you try to discuss the current world situation in terms of "Communism" and "anti-Communism," you simply are not talking about anything. American leadership today is shallow. Leadership, did we say? We have no leadership. We only have funny little men who know that subservience to the Jews is the road to office and empty, trivial fame and glory. Unless a real American leadership competent in the practice of real Statecraft appears in the near-term future, we are forced to tell you that the outlook for the American future is black indeed.
